

Tech Security Veteran Karel Obluk Joins Qustodio's Board of Advisors

Vast Industry Experience to Support Company's Growth in Parental Control Software Industry

BARCELONA, SPAIN – March 5, 2013 – Qustodio, a leading parental control software company for families worldwide, today announced the appointment of Karel Obluk to its Board of Advisors. Obluk brings more than 25 years of experience in executive and C-level roles at leading security and consumer brands including AVG, where he helped the company become one of the top five antivirus programs in the world from its six million users in 2003 to more than 143 million active users worldwide today.

Obluk's appointment comes at a time of continued growth for Qustodio and is congruent with the company's mission of providing online security to protect families.

“Qustodio is helping make online experiences fun while ensuring the highest level of online security available for families,” said Obluk. “I'm pleased to join the team to help fast-forward its vision of educating parents about the vital need to secure online internet activity.”

Eduardo Cruz, CEO and co-founder of Qustodio, commented, “Obluk offers a wealth of leadership expertise garnered from important global technology companies and we're delighted to welcome him to our board of directors. His expertise in growing companies and building consumer and developer advocacy are tremendous assets as Qustodio continues its drive to be the leading parental control software for parents and families.”
